mistaken as to what is really for their own interest may, we think, readily be shown. I all countries, but especially in new ones, is important that every effort should be made to secure as energetic a population as possible. The Chinese, in industrial life, are the most energetic and enterprising race in Asia. Their superiority to the Malay race is shown by the gargway. In consequence of this detention he demand for Chinese labour in Singapore and the Malay Peninsula. In the same field they can be pretty accurately measured against | the captain's statement, and added that he tried to the Indian labourers, and the result shows that, roughly speaking, two Chinamon will do as much work as three Klings. The Indians are more decile, and more easily go-

verued than the Chinese, but a little of the turbulent disposition is almost always found with an enterprising spirit, and so long as it does not run to extremes need others of extra duties. Captain Thomastt said the not cause much solicitude. In Australia the charge of immerality has been brought against the Chinese for the purpose of supporting the cry against them, but it has never been alleged that they constituted a danger to the peace and good order of the communities amongst whom they settled, and even their immorality has been much exaggerated The only objection seriousl entertained to them is that they enter too closely into competition with the European, and thrown into a semi-panic by the fear of this competition the Australians have incontinently rejected the assistance of a hardy and useful race in the development of Messrs. Kelly & Walsh, S'ghai. their country and appear now to be Free Eastern Extension, Australiana seeking that of a comparatively effete race. The result can only be to retard the progress of the country, and the working men in whose supposed interests the Chinese are said be excluded, will suffer from this as well as the other classes of the propulation. The working class are always better off in a developing than in a stagnating country, and to arrest progress by attempting to exclude combting labour is equivalent to killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. There is not much fear of Australia stagnating, but the retardation of her progress will have the same effect in a minor degree. Much may be done with Indian labour in opening up the rich resources of the North, but we venture to think that in course of time the Australians will recognise guaranteed for five years. THE PARIS OPERA BOUFFE COM-PANY AT THE THEATRE ROYAL.

On Wednesday night the Paris Opera Bouffe Company, which arrived here by the last French mail steamer from Saigon, gave a performance back. Witness then ran after him, and brought For each camp each year, a saving of more at the Theatre Royal, City Hall, whon Messieurs Wigmore Street, and the Brinsmead "ianoforte Chinese and will once more open their ports Duo" was produced. The music of this operation for Road Kartish Town N.W. London. is by Charles Lecoco, and like all this composer's, productions, is gay and sparkling, but somewhat difficult to efficiently interpret. The Paris Opera Company, though very deficient in The Courrier du Japon, a French journal vocal power, are well up in the business of the hence achieving a fair measure of success.

The plot of the opera is very slight, and its success mainly depends upon the excellence of the music, the comic situations, and the wit o the dialogue. The opening scene is laid in the Hall of the Œil-de-Bouf in the Palace_of Versailles, when the Duc de Parthenay, a boy of -fifteen, is about to be united to Lady Blanche The conclusion of Sir Rutherford Alcock's de Cambry, and festivities are the order of the day. The Little Duke is at first inconsolable and robels against his tutor (Primouse), but is somewhat consoled when he is placed in command of the Parthenay Regiment to go on a campaign. The second act finds the Duchess at the Seminary at Luneville, where she is engaged, with other young ladies of high birth, in her studies. She confides her sorrows to her school companions, who agree to make it hot for Frimousse, who has been enthat great efforts are being made to start a Per | gaged as professor of belles lettres to the Semiking Branch of the Asiatic Society, and that Sir | nary, While he is delivering a lecture to the pupils the sound of trumpets is heard, when is issoon ascertained that the Parthenay Regiment has arrived in town, and M. do Montlandry pre-

The Professor calls for assistance and the domestics rushin, but the Little Duke confronts them with a pistol, throws off his disguise and they retire routed. And, as many of the Roman Catholic refuse to dine out on Friday for fear of offending their consciences, but will both dine and dance on a Sunday - he might not be improper to extend the same tender feelings to Protestants who regard the Lord's Day as more secred than Friday. I observe that at Hongkong the foreigners had wisely agreed to hold the 26th. This is as it ought to be, especially in Christian Protestant countries like Great Britain and the United States. The principal topic of conversation in Peling during the last few days has been the case of Li Chao-shao, afterwards changed into Li Shihjung, of Anhuoi, a man of great ability and of benevolent deeds, who was a peacemaker and a harmoniser of quarrels, succeeding when all others failed. The fact of coming alone when a whole army dare not attempt to seize him, so charmed the hero that he gave up his rebellious spirit and followed Sheng, fought bravely, and became a high officer. On this account his name was changed. After Shong's execution, Li again was, prone to become a rebel. At this time Taeng Kuo-fen and Li Hung-chang came to the front. They were afraid he would rebel, and so deposed him. He has always had a following of several hundred and has consequently been feared -hence the present memorial advising his excontion. The Decree has now cone forth-to let it be done as desired. THE REVISION OF THE OPIUM

TIENTSIN, 12th January. The Opium Question has been coming lately yery considerably to the fore. A leader in your paper some time ago sounded the note of the prononed change in the collection of the column revenue, and the Vicercy Li's Memorial to the Throne on the subject appeared a month and a half ago in the pages of your Chinese contem. norary the Shin Pao. Since then both Li and Tso seem from all accounts to have been inun: dated with memorials on the subject, each writer Gilbert Marren, seaman of the American ship, ventilating his own remedy for the ours of the part of the website, and the report is probably traffic. The British Minister spent some time here in negotiations with the Viceroy in regard to opium. Tso arrived from Peking and took part in the deliberations. All three left Tientsin shortly before Christmas, and the Viceroy's departure for Pag-ting Fu was consequently delayed. All three have now left Tientsin-the British official for Peking, the Northern Vicercy mation that one despairs of any reform being for the provincial capital, and Teo, who accompanied him, on his way to Nanking. task is not an easy one. Some may doubt its importance. Opium could be put down in China with more ease than ardent spirits in England. yearly or yearly. At present, when there is no war, for this reason, that in the former country there are not two opinions regarding the deleterious character of the vice and moderation is practically unknown. The Chinese Government, too, is less prerogatives; insists upon the Oath of Allegidependent upon opium for revenue than England ance; and binds all official to abstain from all pensois just the same. Certainly all this money cannot upon intexicating drinks and India upon the axitation, and to support the policy of the Gopoppy. The private and publicly expressed views of these celebrated statesmen are well known, and believed to l perfectly sincere. They who enjoy direct and social intercourse with the Vicercy Li-and they have the best means of judging-tell ue so. Di plomatic courtesy perhaps demands that. Their views as expressed to British officials should be modified. It is well known that they express pretty strong views to the representatives of the United States, Germany, etc. Li has been pleased with the Memorial from the Canton Guild respect ing an Opium Syndicate, and is willing to give it a full neval honours. It appears that Captain trial for a year or two, and has accordingly recom. Browning with a party of four British sailors mended it to the throne. This doubtless has been the subject of the late protracted negotiations coast, when a dhow flying the French colours t Tientsin. He fears, however, there may be a snake lurking in the grass, but the plan looks so willing to give it a trial. If opium smokers get asked to be allowed to see the papers. Instead specious, convenient, and economical that he is into the Syndicate it is feared that it may wrought for personal aggrandisement. The large, regular and certain revenue to be derived may ultimately blind the eyes even of this heathen Government, that has all along refused to live on the vice and misery of its people. Western the grasp of his assailant and struck him a blow Christian nations have shown themselves prone to fall into this error. The late Inspector-General of Customs recently declared that all anti-opium resistance, he and his men were overpowered by agitation was just forty years behind date. The superiority of numbers. present opportunity may prove the incorrectness of the statement. If the present opportunity be let slip, humanly speaking all hope of eradi cating the vice may almost be given up. The British Minister is of course anxious to put in torse the terms of the Chefor agreement, but is these cannot now be carried out as then intended some other plan mutually agreeable has to be devised. The present is such a plan, but whather or not it has received the sanction of England The Memorials of Tso and Li have not peared, nor are they likely ever to appear, in the Peking Gazette. Their contents are, however, well-known, and relate to the proposed Opium outrage. He, however, returned to Pemba at once, taking with him 100 of the Sultan's guards Syndicate at Hongkong and the collection of the duty and lekin there. The views set forth for Brigadier Mathews. The to increase the lekin, but not the duty at the ports, although the impression given forth by dhow was not French, and the Frenchmen here many was to the effect that the Chinese were entirely free and could tax and prohibit the opium trade just as they A correspondent, a merchant, and formerly in the opium trade, lately used the following language, speaking of the Viceroy's letter to the Auti-Opium Society,- That letter is as far from the truth as can bo. The whole matter lies in a nutshell, and is entirely in the hands of the Chinese Government. They can put down if they are so minded, but the Vicerov's letter is proof they are not so minded. Chinese have to do is to stop the growth of native opium in China and put an inland or lekin daty on foreign opium of 1,000 or 10,000 teels a of poor Captain Browning, whilst running We claim no protection over it after it leaves the ship or hong for inland consumption. These are plain and simple and unanswerable facts. With so simple and efficacions a cure for the deadly complaint, it is simply sickening to read wha is said by the Chinese and the Anti-Onium Society. If they are really in earnest, why not use this plan? Let it be put before the authorities and see how they like it. Their refusal to do so will try them. There is not one in ten of the officials who would willingly lose his chance of revenue-plunder out of the opium traffic. rather than that this traffic should not be continued." But even in the matter of internal barriers and lekin they have not been left quite so free as is often supposed. The British Minister's interpretation of the treaty seems to give him the right in respect of abnormal taxation and the Grand Secretary Li has admitted this to be at least reasonable. What agree to this, China, it is proposed, will stop the native growth, and will agree, some say whether the article be imported or not, to pay India the full amount each year; though the import gradually diminishes. This is true Oriental liberality; extravagance which puts to-the blush all the protended liberality and Christian principle of western nations. Imagine, China for sixteen years paying the large Indian revenue from opium at the above ever-increasing rate! Could any argument for the sincerity of the Chinese and for their detestation and horror of the vice and their desire to eradicate it; be stronger? We hardly believe, however, this not well-founded. This last Memorialist writes apparently ignorant of the proposed Opium Syndicate at Hong-, kong proposed to Li by another Cantonese. In this latter memorial it is proposed to buy from India the amount of the imported drag-say 80,000 chests-to distribute it over China, and the profit on the sale to be divided between India and Chine. By sharing with India balf the profit she will be better able to bear the proposed gradual diminution and final extinction of the trade. The native opium is at the same time to be interdicted, but it does not say whether at once-at the beginning or end of the New Year -or gradually during the period, and if the latter how or in what manner and under what guarantee. One strange thing about the proposal is that if China should any year need more than arrives by victue of the agreement for any future year, she may write to India and ask for more. This proposal seems to nullify the virtue of the other. The difficulty arises from a regard to stopping the opium cultivation; the vice of smoking remaining untouched. The idea of the Canton Guild is to purchase the 80,000 chests from India at a cost of Tis. 2 million; to pay the Chinese Government Tls. 150 per chest and to have the entire disposal of it afterwards throughout China. This looks very like an oplam "corner," or as the Chinese term____ it chih tuh chuang. In a late memorial from Li, the Vicercy at Pasting Fu, it would appear that he has grave doubts about the carrying out of this scheme; he writes in a depreciating tone of it, and if report speak the truth, is inclined to set it aside as a scheme fraught with danger and although plausible, yet proposed for personal

OPIUM AND COMMON SENSE.

The following article, from the pen of Rutherford Alcock late British Minister-in-Nineteenth Century :-

In view of all the evidence new before the to further restrict the area if they see fit reader of the absence of all serious effort either for no vested or private interest can grow up to to restrain the foreign import or the ustive cul- fetter their action at any future day. My proposal ture of opium during this long stretch of years, to the Chinese Government in the Convention of what is to be said of the emotional sentiment of 1869 was based on this power. I proposed to Li Hung Chang's answer to the Society for the give the Chinese an increased import duty, and Suppression of the Opium Trade? His refer moreover to allow them to test their power and ence to the wide and nuchecked extension of will to limit and diminish the hitherto unchecked the poppy-fields in China is a cariosity even in diplomatic experience. He says that the 'poppy is certainly surreptitiously grown in some parts | ing a certain period, not to extend the production of China, notwithstanding the laws and frequent in India; and if the Chinese Government kept Imperial edicts prohibiting the cultivation. faith, and showed their power to greatly diminish. Surreptitiously? That is, the half of China, and more or less rapidly stop the chiltere of the and with payment of taxes sanctioned at his poppy altogether, and prevent foreign opium suggestion by Imperial order! This is surely from other sources taking its place, the Indian the triumph of misrepresentation unchecked by Government would then, pari passu, consider any regard for facts. But the next sentence is how far they could further co-operate by dimistill finer, when he adds :- I may take the op- nishing their own area of culture, having portunity to assert here, once for all, that the time to substitute other crops and industries to single aim of my Government in taxing opinm | take its place. I think it is to be regretted that will be in the future, as it has always been in | such an opportunity of testing the slucerity and | the past, to repress the traffic, never to gain power of the Chinese Government to affect the revenue from such a source. The last phase proposed end was lost. How far the allegations or convictions of the missionaries are well founded, or otherwise, as to the obstruction and projudice created by the pages e opium trade, and our active participation in it, I to will not attempt to decide. I am bound to say, bowever, that, if time and space permitted, it opium trade. And we are now free to consider would not be difficult to show that many other, the fiscal and commercial interests at stake, and if not more obvious and influential, causes are the expediency as a matter of policy, or the practicability of idopting any of the measures in operation, to account for the small degree urged by the advocates of a total suppression of ci success which has attended their efforts to Christianise the Chinese population, And I will add that I do not believe, after a long ally. moment willingly, not to say eagerly, receiving residence in China, that the active and latent a revenue through the Maritime Customs on hostility of the literationed gentry, who are opium, of 2,251,814 tacks (675,5441.)—which by generally the instigators of all outrages on the the Chefoo Convention they are seeking to missions, or the official and ruling classes who double. This, independent of all Likin and other are so supine, and the populace that supply the inland taxation, in which they have always had lagents of violence, would be other than it is, or uncontrolled power, and at the lowest estimate, suffer any diminution, if there were no opium
